The Mushroom Pot is all set to change the impression that it is primarily about long-drawn steamboat dinners. Its Millenia Walk branch, open since March, features set meals which are delightfully lunch-friendly for busy office workers.

Each meal arrives neatly on a smart black tray, and the delicious grub includes much more than mushrooms alone. With the huge variety of sets at friendly prices ($9.80 – $23.80), perhaps the only thing that will get in the way of a quick lunch is the time you will spend making up your mind what to eat!

It would be impossible to list every variation here, but as an example, a simple Chicken Ramen Set ($9.80) has chicken ramen, wild mushroom with Thai spices and fresh fruit while the Deluxe Beef Paper Pot Et Tibet Rib Set ($18.80) has a beef paper pot, Tibet ribs, mushroom rolls, mushroom salad, rice and fresh fruit. Add $1 for a drink.

I opted for the latter set, and found the slices of Australian beef most tender – even the few that I left to sit and cook. The paper pot, just right for one person, also held delicious mushroom soup, creamy golden mushrooms, shiitake, tofu and vermicelli.

The mushroom rolls were crispy outside, and chewy in that delectable "mushroomy" way inside; the salad was refreshing; and the Tibet rib sweetish and not at all heavy on my fast-filling tummy.

Items I sampled from my companions' sets were the Monkey Head mushroom with wasabi, fried to an interestingly light crunchiness; and the tasty beef and golden mushroom rolls.

If you prefer something even simpler, you can order a la carte ramen ($6.90 – $15.80), fried noodles/rice ($10 – $12) or side dishes ($4 – $7).

The set menu is also available at the Orchard Point outlet.
